Students at Temple University, where a majority of the school's adjuncts support joining the United Academics of Philadelphia union. / CHARLES MOSTOLLER, METRO

Part-time adjuncts aim for job security

Education. Adjunct, part-time professors in Philadelphia are slowly but steadily organizing for better conditions.

Anna Neighbor has an MFA in art and holds teaching positions at the University of Pennsylvania and Moore College of Art. But not long ago, she was applying for public assistance.

"When I have three classes a semester and I lose one of them, that can be up to a sixth of my income for that year, just gone," Neighbor, a member of United Academics of Philadelphia (UAP), said. "Compensating for that, still trying to get dinner on the table when you've lost thousands and thousands of dollars, that's a real struggle. And that's absolutely the norm in the adjunct lifestyle."

As UPenn continues to revamp its campus and Temple University plans a new $190 million library, the instructors who allow Philadelphia's colleges to teach even more students for less money are seeing little if any of that pie.

Now the adjuncts, part-time instructors without the salaries, benefits or job security that most academics enjoy, are striking back. At Temple, a majority of adjuncts filed authorization cards last month seeking unionization under the UAP, a local of the American Federation of Teachers (AFT), and are waiting for approval to hold an election.

The Pennsylvania Labor Relations Board wouldn't say how long it will take to reach a decision, but organizers said a majority of Temple's roughly 1,100 adjuncts signed cards to join the UAP.

What do adjuncts want? First off, job security.

Their courses can be canceled on short notice — sometimes just days. And unlike full-time faculty, adjuncts who don't teach, don't get paid.

"This is the week when people are losing their classes who thought they were going to have work from January to May," said Jennie Shanker, 50, an adjunct professor at Temple University's Tyler School of Art and UAP member.

Shanker went on unemployment for a year after her workload was cut, from a full-time schedule she held for eight years to one course a semester.

"I never ever thought I'd end up on public assistance," she said.

Temple did not comment on the UAP's petition.

"Temple has actively engaged in responding to adjunct faculty concerns," a spokesman said.

Neighbor says a successful bid for unionizing at Temple will "be the beginning of raising conditions everywhere in Philadelphia."

Quoted

"It's not even that we're unionizing and asking to be made full-time tenured professors. We're asking for the most basic, basic rights of security and stability."

Teaching college part-time

Adjunct professors need the same credentials as full-time professors, but teach courses based on "letters of appointment."

- Adjuncts are estimated to make up 60 to 75 percent of the higher education workforce.
- "Every university I have experience at or am familiar with is increasing their use of adjuncts," said a Philadelphia professor who declined to give their name. "The pay is quite low and the workload is extremely high."
- United Academics of Philadelphia membership dues for instructors at non-organized schools are $11 a month.
- Once unionized, schools negotiate their own dues — usually one to two percent of pay.

Thoughts on adjuncts

"The adjunct professor is kind of a weird concept. These are people with master's degrees, very highly educated people, and they're forced to have a part-time job."
Benjamin Bryan, 21, Temple student

"It takes away from the level of education that students are getting if they [adjuncts] don't have proper resources. They should have a union."
Kaya Proctor, 18, Temple student

"I knew an adjunct who worked at a restaurant. He could never make plans. He never knew if he was going to come back. ... It's a bummer because I would love for these professors to stick around."
Caitlin Feeney, 21, Temple student

Murder. Child advocate executed near Temple campus

A 56-year-old child advocate was gunned down blocks away from Temple University's North Philadelphia campus.

Police said Kim Jones, a program director for Turning Points for Children was shot "execution-style" in the back of the head while walking toward a bus stop at 9:16 a.m. at 12th and Jefferson Streets, according to Officer Tanya Little, a police spokeswoman.

University officials said Jones was not affiliated with the university.

The shooter, described only as a heavyset black man dressed in black and carrying a duffle bag, was seen fleeing west on Jefferson Street.

Temple University sent out a university-wide alert shortly after the incident.

Tips

A $20,000 reward will be awarded to anyone who offers information that leads to an arrest and conviction of the shooter.

- Anyone with information is asked to contact the Homicide Unit at 215-686-3334, or the police tip line at 215-686-8477.

SEPTA Spokesman Andrew Busch said authorities are reviewing video caught by a security camera on a Route 23 bus that was traveling near the intersection at the time of the incident.

"Nobody involved in the incident was a passenger on the bus," Busch said. "But it does seem like it was in pretty close to where everything happened." TOMMY ROWAN

Tasco won't seek re-election for her 9th District seat

After seven terms, City Councilwoman Marian B. Tasco said Monday she won't seek reelection to the 9th Councilmanic District of Philadelphia.

"Councilwoman Tasco's fierce advocacy for the most vulnerable Philadelphians has shaped her long and admirable career in public service," City Council President Darrell Clarke said in a statement.

Tasco, 77, announced the decision during a talk at the 50th Ward Democratic Executive Committee. She has occupied her seat since 1988. The 9th District includes parts of Northeast and Northwest Philadelphia.

Nutter calls 'neighborhood terrorists' a federal priority

D.C. Mayor Nutter testified Tuesday at the first hearing of the 21st Century Policing task force.

Mayor Michael Nutter / CHARLES MOSTOLLER

Mayor Michael Nutter told a presidential task force Tuesday that while the United States should continue its focus on outside terrorists, cities need more help fighting "neighborhood terrorists."

The White House Task Force on 21st Century Policing, co-chaired by Philadelphia Police Commissioner Charles Ramsey, held its first public hearing in Washington on Tuesday.

The task force was asked to return concrete proposals and recommendations by March 2 on how to build better trust between police and communities across the nation, how to reduce violence against police and offer best policing practices.

Quoted

"There were 248 homicides in Philadelphia last year. So we still have a long way to go."
Nutter

Nutter testified before the 11-member panel along with mayors of Baltimore and Sacramento. The three mayors were asked how the federal government can help cities battle violence and adopt better policing strategies.

Nutter said that in the aftermath of the Sept. 11 attacks, the federal government quickly responded with a new position of director of Homeland Security, which transitioned into the Department of Homeland Security.

Nutter said that while the country shouldn't take its eye off the terrorism ball, "we have homegrown, neighborhood terrorists who terrorize our children when they go to school every day, who terrorize our old folks ... and terrorize folks who are just going to work."

"And so either we want to be safe at home and abroad," he said, "or we don't."

Ramsey calls for change

Philadelphia Police Commissioner Charles Ramsey said the task force "needs to think about ways in which police can be more effective in doing their jobs and reaching out to the community."

Ramsey said he has been in law enforcement for more than 45 years. He previously served as police commissioner in Washington, D.C. for nine years before coming to Philadelphia in 2008 to serve in the same role.

"So I've seen a lot of changes in policing over the years," he said, "but I also recognize that more changes need to be made."

Charlie Hebdo to run Mohammad cartoon on cover

New issue. One Paris newspaper vendor said he had received 200 advance orders for Charlie Hebdo.

Charlie Hebdo will publish a front page showing a caricature of the Prophet Mohammad holding a sign saying "Je suis Charlie" in its first edition since Islamist gunmen attacked the satirical newspaper and killed 12 people.

With demand surging for the edition due today, the weekly planned to print up to 3 million copies, dwarfing its usual run of 60,000, after news agents reported a rush of orders. Digital versions will be posted in English, Spanish and Arabic, while print editions in Italian and Turkish will also appear.

In a parliamentary session Prime Minister Manuel Valls said France was "at war against terrorism, jihadism and radical Islamism" but not the Muslim faith, the country's second-largest, which "has its place in France."

After his speech, lawmakers broke into a spontaneous rendition of La Marseillaise, a first in parliament's history.

The front page of Charlie Hebdo's Jan. 14 edition shows a tearful Mohammad with a sign "Je suis Charlie" (I am Charlie) below the headline: "Tout est pardonné" (All is forgiven).

"I wrote 'all is forgiven' and I cried," Renald Luzier, who drew the image, told journalists at the weekly's temporary office at the headquarters of the left-wing daily Liberation.

NTSB. Probe into Washington subway smoke may take a year

A Washington, D.C., firefighter assists a woman to medical aid after she became stuck with other passengers on the Washington METRO (subway) service Monday, after smoke filled the L'Efant Plaza station during rush hour. / GETTY IMAGES

The investigation into smoke in a Washington subway tunnel that killed a woman and sent 84 people to hospitals could take six to 12 months, a spokesman for the National Transportation Safety Board said on Tuesday.

The preliminary cause of the smoke that filled six subway cars in a tunnel on Monday was electrical arcing involving the charged third rail about 1,100 feet ahead of the train, NTSB spokesman Peter Knudson said.

"What caused the electrical arcing is what we want to understand," he said. Arcing happens when electricity from the power rail comes into contact with something that conducts electricity, like water.

The smoke occurred about 800 feet south of the Washington Metro's L'Enfant Plaza station in a tunnel leading to the Pentagon Metro station. Passengers evacuated themselves from the stalled cars and there was no fire on the train or derailment, the NTSB said in a statement.

Emergency response will be among the areas investigated, the statement said. The Washington Post quoted some passengers as saying it had taken firefighters an hour to reach the train.

In a statement, Tom Downs, the chairman of the Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority, apologized for the incident. He said that once the cause was determined, Metro was prepared to keep it from happening again. REUTERS

Ukraine bus attack kills 11

A passenger bus came under heavy fire in eastern Ukraine on Tuesday, killing at least 11 people, Ukrainian authorities said, and fighting intensified around the international airport in the city of Donetsk as separatists tried to oust government forces.

Facebook to issue missing children alerts

Facebook plans to use its estimated 140 million daily U.S. users to help track missing children through emergency alerts, the company said on Tuesday.

Facebook partnered with the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children to immediately begin sending AMBER Alerts, including photographs and other details, to the news feeds of users in targeted search areas.

"The chances of finding a missing child increase when more people are on the lookout," Emily Vacher, trust and safety manager at Facebook, said in a statement. "Our goal is to help get these alerts out quickly to the people who are in the best position to help."

AMBER Alert is a voluntary program coordinated by the Department of Justice in which emergency messages are issued by law enforcement, broadcasters and other agencies in cases of serious child abductions.

Attorney General Eric Holder on Tuesday said expanding the alerts to Facebook would raise the chances of saving abducted children, who can be in increasing danger the longer they go missing. REUTERS

Leonardo DiCaprio and Rihanna? Why not.

Leonardo DiCaprio and Rihanna were spotted living it up together at a recent Playboy Mansion party, which admittedly sounds like a game of Hollywood gossip Mad Libs. But when it comes to how intimate they were getting, we're left with a different game all together: dueling anonymous sources. One such source claims that DiCaprio and Rihanna were being incredibly flirty, going so far as locking lips at the soiree. But another? "No one was making out. They are just friends. That's it," the second source tells E! News. "There was a big group dancing. Tom Hardy, Naomi Campbell and a bunch of other people. Everyone was having a good time together. Maybe a little bit of friendly flirting but no scandal here." Oh, you're no fun.

Everyone has goals, dreams, things they really want to do. For new Golden Globe winner, Billy Bob Thornton that includes Jennifer Aniston. Thornton did a bit of an over-share backstage at the Globes when challenged to a game of Would You Rather, pitting celebrities against each other to vie for the "Fargo" star's amorous attention. When asked to choose between Reese Witherspoon and Aniston, Thornton quickly replied, "Jennifer Aniston, lifelong goal. That's all I'm saying." And, I mean, a simple yes or no would sufficed. But it's good to know that he and Brad Pitt have such consistently similar tastes.

Zooey Deschanel expecting the most twee baby ever

The nice thing about all these celebrities having lifestyle websites is that they can handle all their big life announcements themselves. Much like Blake Lively did last October on Preserve, "New Girl" star Zooey Deschanel has used Hello Giggles to reveal that she is pregnant. Deschanel and boyfriend Jacob Pechenik are expecting their first child together this summer. "Jacob and I are over the moon. We are so excited to meet our little one," Deschanel says in a statement. As of press time, there was no word on how chunky the baby's bangs would eventually be.

Restaurant rumors

Silk City and N. 3rd owner Mark Bee confirmed his first restaurant/bar Franky Bradley's will open Jan. 15 at the corner of Juniper and Chancellor. Two years ago, Bee made a deal for the space, which at the time was the just-closed lesbian bar Sisters. Going back further, the corner spot was the site of the legendary seafood and steak restaurant Frankie Bradley's, named for its owner, a Jewish boxer in the 1920s. Bee and chef David Kane are updating the restaurant's supper club vibe.

The Italian Market area is overflowing with new restaurant deals. Noord chef/co-owner Joncarl Lachman has leased 943 S. Ninth St. for a Franco-North African bar/restaurant opening in May.

Nearby, 824 S. Eighth St., most recently The Mildred, just found new operators in the crew from Memphis Taproom for Coeur, an upcoming casual bistro.

There's also motion on South 10th Street between Reed and Wharton at the old Triangle bar, with its rumored new owners from Cantina Los Caballitos moving forward with construction.

Plus, an orange liquor-license sticker went up at the corner of 10th and Wharton for a still-unnamed saloon.

Chris Hemsworth: From superhero to super-hacker

Interview. The 'Avengers' star turns cyber-sleuth in 'Blackhat.' But that doesn't mean he's not in great shape.

When you hire the guy who plays Thor in "The Avengers" to be the lead hacker in your cyber-security drama, you kind of have to accept the fact that he's going to be one of those rare hackers in really good shape. But Michael Mann wanted it to at least be a little plausible that Chris Hemsworth's superhuman physique could belong to an expert coder.

Luckily, we meet Hathaway, Hemsworth's character in "Blackhat," while he's behind bars, doing time for scads of computer crimes — and also doing a lot of push-ups.

"Once I'm done with Thor, I get rid of that bulk and that size because that just sort of screams that character," Hemsworth explains. "Me and Michael talked about the time he'd spent in prison. You go in one person and come out another, and through those experiences he was going to physically be able to handle himself."

Hemsworth also had to pass muster behind a keyboard, which was much more foreign to him. So time spent with the cyber-security experts hired for the film — some former black-hat hackers — proved invaluable.

"I remember asking one of the guys, 'Knowing what you know' — because it became evident pretty quick that the majority of us knew nothing compared to what these guys knew — 'do you look at the world differently? Do you feel you have an upper hand?' And he just started laughing. He said, 'Man, people have no idea how exposed they are and vulnerable and what's possible.'"

Globe-trotting

Around the world

Also impressive for Hemsworth? Mann's insistence of shooting on location, in authentic places — a mandate that took him to Kuala Lumpur, Jakarta and Hong Kong. "You could shoot on the backlot in L.A. somewhere, in some parking lot and mock it up on a green screen, which I've had plenty of over the years. But you have a visceral, physical response to being in those places," he explains. "The sights and sounds and smells just bring something out of you, and you're not having to fake or imagine that it's there. It becomes as much of an actor — something you bounce off — as the other people you're working with. That was such a treat, to work in those places, which are loud and noisy. A lot of the time I remember the sound guy was worried about, 'We can't shoot this, it's too much noise,' and Michael was just, 'No, no, keep going, this is great.'"

‘Community’ may not end with its new Yahoo season

Series. Gillian Jacobs and Dan Harmon reveal what’s in store for the new run of their undying show.

“Community”s’ Yahoo premiere is set for March 17. / NBC/NBCU PHOTO BANK

Tuesday’s TCA panel featured the cast of “Community,” the world’s first TV show to go from a broadcast network to Yahoo. Cast members Joel McHale, Gillian Jacobs and Ken Jeong were there, as was creator Dan Harmon and producer Chris McKenna. Per Harmon, the decision to move it to Yahoo happened so last minute, “It was all happening in like the last eight hours of its legality.”

As to just how much more “Community” fans are likely to get, Harmon only says, “I’m not writing it as if it’s the end.” He recognizes how fans have saved the show again and again. “This show has lived by the sword of a very intimate relationship with fans, and it will die by that sword.”

Harmon also talks about the freedom from the pressure of Nielsen numbers, saying “The corset loosens a bit.”

The move to being an online show made sense to the cast. “It sort of felt like it was an online show for a while, so it’s kind of good that we are online,” says Jacobs.

“It’ll be weird when we get canceled by the Internet and become a roving band of street performers,” jokes Harmon.

The show will premiere March 17, with two new episodes premiering every Tuesday.

Beyond the city

Three suburbs

"I'd start with Wayne," says Leah Milito, a realtor with City Space. "Its charming downtown is also just a short train ride into the city. Phoenixville is another suburban neighborhood with a great downtown, as well as a touch of the country life."

Jennifer Nehila points to the Media area, specifically Morton, with its low prices and solid school district. "Your agent should keep an eye out for Morton," she says. "Even if you have to go out and knock on some doors."

HOTTEST 'HOODS OF 2015

It's a big city -- where should you buy? / B. KRIST FOR VISIT PHILADELPHIA

For first-time buyers

If you're a first-time buyer on a budget, Center City proper is likely out of the question. So is Graduate Hospital, a once-upon-a-time affordable "outlier."

Jennifer Nehila, a realtor with Keller Williams Center City, directs these clients farther south. "Most of my first-time homebuyers start out looking at Graduate Hospital, but many of them end up landing south of Washington," she says. "I steer a lot of my families south of Snyder near the Broad Street line. It gives you a lot of bang for your buck when you're that close to a major rail line."

Although south-of-Washington neighborhoods like Newbold are still up-and-coming, they look like an increasingly safe bet. "The fact that the empty lot [at] Broad and Washington is about to become a new development by [Bart] Blatstein almost ensures that if you grow out of the home ... its location will still be desirable," says Gwen Perseghin, director of operations and partner at JG Real Estate.

Former standbys for younger buyers are still going strong. "First-time buyers love Fishtown and Passyunk," says realtor Liz Lutz of RE/MAX Home Experts. "The restaurants offered are excellent, and there is so much in walking distance."

For young families

If you have young children, school districts will likely influence your decision.

Queen Village, the city's oldest residential neighborhood, is popular with young families (who can afford it).

R. KENNEDY FOR VISIT PHILADELPHIA

perennial favorite among young families because it has a great close-knit neighborhood feel — and tons of kids — while still being just steps away from Society Hill and the rest of Center City," says realtor Sean Kaplan with John Brown & Associates at BHHS, Fox & Roach, Realtors. "Many parts of Queen Village also fall within the catchment for the Meredith School, which is one of the most popular K-8 public schools in town."

West Philly is also a popular choice thanks to the University of Pennsylvania-supported Penn Alexander School — but snagging a home that falls in its boundaries is notoriously difficult, warns Nehila. "I steer clients to a West Philly-specific realtor," she says. "Anything in the Penn Alexander Catchment will go so quickly."

Point Breeze

Almost every realtor we talked to says Point Breeze is the place to buy. Even as the South Philly neighborhood explodes with new developments and restaurants, there are still deals to be had.

"The more people that move here, the more likely it is that new businesses will open, and that will just encourage the development even more," says Perseghin. "The same exact new construction home that you can get in Point Breeze would be $100,000 more just as far south but on the east side of Broad Street."

Kaplan agrees. "Point Breeze to the south and parts of Francisville to the north seem to be just under the boiling point right now. ... There are some very good values there that I think will offer the opportunity for a tremendous amount of appreciation over the next decade."

Apps making good use of the iPhone 6 Plus

The iPhone 6 Plus is now four months old, which should have been enough time for developers to tailor their wares to its disarming, bewilderingly large size. (Seriously, you probably can't get your hand around it.) And yet there hasn't been a massive influx of Plus-exploiting programs. Just a handful have realized there's more real estate to work with. Here are some apps that use the full capabilities of your newish, pricey gizmo. MATT PRIGGE

The extra space really comes in handy with this whimsical photography app, which transforms regular photos into rough crayon drawings. Everything, from the images to the controls, are now on one, non-cluttered screen.

'Open Table'

A handful of old apps, including those for CNN and American Airlines, have gone super-sized, exploiting a screen large enough to yield two side-by-side sections. The most elegant of these is this restaurant app, which, when you hold the phone sideways, brings up a map, allowing you to select restaurants by clicking on thumbnails rather than just showing you a list.

'Sky Guide'

Cruising the skies with an annotated space guide is now a lot easier and prettier with this Plus-sized app, which allows you to scan your surroundings for all the stars and constellations. If you want an elegant way to reinforce your cosmic insignificance, you can't do prettier.

'PCalculate'

Unless it's your job, you're probably not going to need this extra-large version of the built-in calculator that now includes, when you turn it sideways, some heavy math. But hey, if someone suddenly needs the cosine of a number, you can be the surprise savior.

'Goat Simulator'

And then there's this: the popular game in which you control a belligerent, jumping, head-ramming goat is now roomier, making it easier to dive from a slide onto a trampoline and run full-speed into a man proposing to his beloved.

Horoscope

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan. 20. Let your accomplishments pave the way for new beginnings. Your actions will impress and help position you for opportunities.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb. 18. Don't become overwhelmed by unfinished chores. If you organize and strategize, you will slowly but surely accomplish whatever you set out to do.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20. Be more assertive if you want to dictate the way situations unfold. You have all the qualities necessary to present what you have.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20. Focus on love. Business events will be the perfect place to meet someone who shares your interests.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21. Make an effort to get along with your peers. Sharing information will help you form an alliance with someone who can help you.

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20. Emotions will run high, causing problems with overly sensitive people. A hobby will keep you out of trouble. Avoid disputes that could lead to irreconcilable differences.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22. Pay greater attention to the ones you love. By making someone feel special, you will gain respect and personal stability.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22. Don't let a lack of confidence stop you from considering a new vocation. Be proud of your accomplishments.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22. A friend will ask for your advice. Compromise will come in handy when interacting with business associates. You will be inspired to start a new project.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21. Differences of opinion can quickly escalate into an argument. Stick to basics as well as to the truth, and resist the urge to blame or find fault in others.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21. Don't let someone act on your behalf. Once you have decided what needs to be done, get on with the job. EUGENIA LAST

Letters to the editor

Free speech must extend to everyone

Re: 'Don't be afraid to speak freely' (Metro, Jan. 13) I agree with letter writer Frederick R. Bedell Jr. that our society needs a constant reminder of famous sentiment: "I disapprove of what you say, but I will defend to the death your right to say it."

That notion is embedded in the foundation of the United States, though of course throughout history it has been forgotten and countless dissenters have become political prisoners or martyrs. Of course, one cannot expect to say anything they please without consequence, but their life and liberty should not be at stake.

In Tuesday's Metro, he suggested that this principle should have been extended to the authors of the French newspaper who were tragically killed last week, and I of course concur that they should not have died.

I believe I must have missed the disclaimer on his letter, though, where that same right to freedom of thought and expression is not to be extended to Muslims.

There was not one mention in his piece about how Muslims have been barred by law from wearing the burqa in France since 2010; should that right to religious expression not be defended?

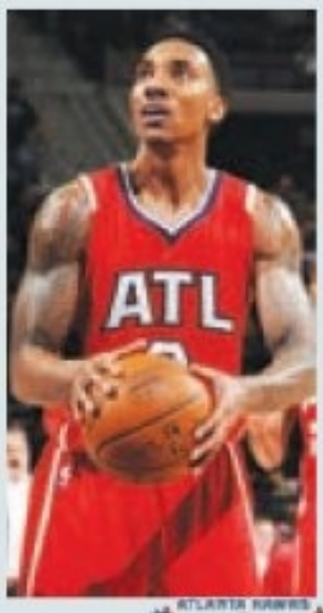
NBA power rankings | by James Toscano

No. 1



Hawks (29-8)

After starting the year 7-6, the Hawks have gone 22-2 and will improve to 24-2 after games against the Celtics and Sixers. Jeff Teague has improved every season in the league (five) and is playing at an All-Star level.

No. 2

Warriors (29-5)

You may not know much about Draymond Green, but just know that lots of NBA GMs really messed up. He was drafted 35th overall in 2012.

No. 3

Blazers (30-8)

Damian Lillard took off for a huge slam over helpless Lakers defenders on Sunday. It kind of sums up this in-your-face team that ranks 6th in offense.

No. 4

Grizzlies (26-11)

Adding Jeff Green to the team will boost them from a depth perspective but he may not lead the "grit and grind" group.

No. 5

Rockets (27-11)

Dwight Howard and Kevin Garnett got into it a bit, and credit Howard for at least giving it right back to KG. Both were ejected, but the Rockets won.

No. 6

Mavericks (26-12)

Mark Cuban was not happy with the call that took away Dez Bryant's touchdown. He also can't be happy about the Mavs last two games, both losses.

No. 7

Wizards (25-12)

A 31-point loss to the Hawks is no way to prove you belong atop the East. Then again, they beat the Bulls by 16 before that.

No. 8

Bulls (26-13)

Pau Gasol was thought to be a really good signing for the Bulls. He's playing above all expectations this season and even had a career night recently.

No. 9

Raptors (25-12)

Trouble north of the border? The Raptors are just 4-6 in their last 10 games, including a loss at home on Monday to the streaking Pistons.

Paterno could get wins back

Two Penn State trustees said Monday that the university has proposed new settlement terms with the NCAA. Though the details are not yet known, it is believed the university could get 112 wins back for Joe Paterno. The terms will also determine how the $60 million in fines will be spent.

Phillies' players content to stay put

MLB. Even with hard times ahead, several Phillies' stars are happy to be playing in Philly.

Hamels looks likely to anchor the Phils' rotation in 2015. / GETTY IMAGES

It wasn't long ago that nobody wanted to come to Philadelphia and play for the Phillies and the key players they had wanted to leave. Yes, the 2015 season and the not-too-distant future looks about as bleak as the Terry Francona years. But the difference is the Phillies players who fans identify with aren't anxious to leave.

Curt Schilling and Scott Rolen each put guns to the head of then-general manager Ed Wade during the waning years of Veterans Stadium baseball. They helped push Wade's hand as he gave away his marquee players for mere bodies.

One of the few silver linings for the Phillies heading into the 2015 campaign is that Cole Hamels and Chase Utley aren't screaming for a trade.

Hamels, who is the Phillies lone big bargaining chip, seems content to either go to one of a handful of contending teams or stay with the only organization that he's ever known. Last spring Hamels was asked about how he felt being locked in with the same franchise for so long.

"I have no complaints," Hamels said. "I look at it like this. I came up just as this franchise was turning the corner. I've experienced a lot of success with the Phillies. It's been rough losing the last few years, but I love being a Phillie."

Hamels has grown fond of Philadelphia. He lives in the area during the offseason. So does former Phillie Vance Worley, who pitches for the Pirates. "Vanimal," whose wife is from Roxborough, hoped that the Phillies were going to take a flier on him last year when he was available.

"I really love Philadelphia," Worley said. "I'm from California and I've been around a bit and I think a lot of players love it there because the fans are so great. It's a great ballpark. You see how they responded when the Phillies won. I'm not surprised that guys don't want to leave. I'm happy where I'm playing now, but I didn't want to leave Philly."

It's a very different vibe from the forgettable Midre Cummings era when players were exiled to Philly.

"I remember that period well," former Phillie Rex Hudler said. "I played back for the Phillies when no one wanted to wear the red pinstripes. But I had a great experience there. The fans were amazing. But things are different now. No matter what, you have that beautiful ballpark, you're only a few years removed from that great run they had. They built something that will never be as bad as the Vet during the '90s."

Making moves

The Phillies have made their fair share of noteworthy transactions this offseason.

- The team parted ways with pitchers Mike Adams and A.J. Burnett
- Philly traded Jimmy Rollins to the Dodgers for two pitching prospects.
- They also traded Marlon Byrd to the Reds for another pitching prospect.

Home is where the goals are for Flyers

NHL. The Flyers score more than half a goal more at the Wells Fargo Center.

Claude Giroux, Jakub Voracek and Wayne Simmonds each had multipoint games vs. Tampa. / GETTY IMAGES

If the Flyers could play every game at the Wells Fargo Center, they'd be in pretty good shape.

Philadelphia is 11-6-3 at home (good for 25 of its 41 points). But away from South Broad Street they are a disappointing 6-13-4.

"I think it's a combination of things," Mark Streit said after his three-point game Monday in an attempt to explain the difference. "In December, pretty much the whole month was on the road, tough trips with tough games and tough buildings to play in. It wasn't satisfying. Here we are more confident. We have the great fans and a great building to play in."

In their latest stint at home, the Flyers pulled out three wins in four straight games on home ice, most recently a 7-3 win against the Atlantic Division-leading Tampa Bay Lightning.

The onslaught saw Philly outshoot their rivals from the South 13-6 in a five-goal second period, with Jakub Voracek continuing his season-long tear by adding a goal and an assist. The NHL's points leader now has 52 points through 43 games.

The Flyers power play has been nearly unstoppable at home. Against Tampa on Monday, the Flyers scored three power play goals, upping their scoring percentage to 30.1, the best mark in the NHL (compared to a 23.3 percent mark overall).

"I don't think we did anything crazy or fancy than we normally do," Brayden Schenn said. "I think we got some bounces tonight, some shots on net and pucks were going in."

The team also averages nearly a half a goal more at home, scoring 3.10 at Wells Fargo and just 2.47 goals per game on the road.

This is a difference of 21 percent. Imagine an NBA squad scoring nearly 20 more points per game at home, or an NFL squad scoring almost an extra touchdown on their home field.

Quoted

"The upcoming games, we have to be good either way, and I have faith we will be good on the road as well." Mark Streit

"The home fans get behind us and we like playing here," Schenn said. "I'm not sure how many home games we have left this year, but we have to make them count."

There is good news for the Flyers as they attempt to claw their way back into the playoff picture, as the squad will play six of their next nine games (and 10 of their next 17) at home, including a five-game homestand from Jan. 20-Feb. 5.

Next up for Philly is a one-game road trip against the Capitols.

"We have to be ready for another hard fought game," Schenn said. "They have great players and the team is playing real well right now. That is a team we are trying to catch."
